Aegis Living Breaks into Glassdoor's Best Places to Work List Passion and Purpose Shatter Conventional Wisdom

(Redmond, WA, December 7th, 2016) Glassdoor announces its Top 50 Best Places to Work in 2017 from a list of more than 600,000 companies, and Aegis Living is this year's big surprise.

Aegis Living is a leader in senior living in Washington, California, and Nevada with more than 2,200 employees. What makes the award surprising is that Aegis Living breaks almost every rule on what it takes to be a "Best Place to Work": it's senior living in a youth-obsessed culture; it's high touch in a high tech world; it's a mission-based career in a selfie society.

"In our society, the cultural goliath is a high tech business. We're a high touch business, nurturing more than 2,000 seniors. We're amazingly honored to be named as a Best Place to Work. Our employees deserve this award. They love our residents and value their wisdom. They make our high touch culture an oasis in a high tech world," said Aegis Living Founder and CEO Dwayne Clark. "We're honored they chose a career with us." Employees posting on Glassdoor most frequently wrote about their passion for the mission and the seniors they serve.

- "I find joy in working with my residents. I like to make them laugh, sing, and dance."
- "I work for an awesome and amazing company. I have the support I need to be successful."
- "Teams in the communities love their jobs and think of them more as missions rather than jobs."

Aegis Living's rank in the Top 50 marks the first time that a senior living company has been named on the list. The Best Places to Work are determined using mostly anonymous company reviews shared by U.S. based employees between November 2, 2015 and October 30, 2016.
